From the University Librarian

•

© 1999-2013 University of Nottingham. View our terms of use.

Read more

Jump into action on June 4, 2016 by grabbing a reading log at any of the Livonia Public Library's branches. The library has partnered with the Livonia Public Library Foundation to encourage reading among students and adults alike.

The recent Policies and Practices Committee (PPC) meeting discussed the importance of fostering a culture of reading within the library. The PPC also considered the impact of digital platforms on traditional reading habits and decided to launch a new program to encourage digital reading.

The new program will include a reading log that participants can fill out and submit online. The logs will be available at all library branches, and participants will receive a discount on books purchased through the library's online bookstore.

The library is also considering the possibility of partnering with local bookstores to create a sense of community around reading. This would involve hosting book club events and promoting local authors.

The PPC agreed to continue discussing these initiatives and will report back to the library's governing body in the near future.

•

The Digital Scholarly Communications Open Research Team (DSCT) has recently announced a call for action to the library community. The call is aimed at encouraging librarians to participate in research-related activities and to contribute to the ongoing development of library services.

The call for action is particularly relevant to the library community as it highlights the importance of research and scholarly communications in the digital age. The DSCT is calling for librarians to participate in research-related activities and to contribute to the ongoing development of library services.

The DSCT is particularly interested in receiving feedback on the following topics:

1. How can library services be improved to better support research activities?
2. What are the challenges faced by librarians in supporting research activities?
3. How can library services be better integrated with academic departments?

The call for action is open to all library professionals and will run until the end of the year. Librarians are encouraged to participate and to share their thoughts on these topics.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.

•

The library community is being reminded to participate in the annual Library Management and Senior Leadership Conference (LM&SLC). The conference is an important opportunity for librarians to network and to share their ideas on how to improve library services.

The conference will be held on 12 June 2016 and will feature a range of speakers and workshops. Librarians are encouraged to attend and to participate in the discussions.

The conference is open to all library professionals and is free to attend. Librarians are encouraged to register in advance and to take advantage of this important opportunity to improve library services.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.

•

The library community is being reminded to participate in the annual Library Management and Senior Leadership Conference (LM&SLC). The conference is an important opportunity for librarians to network and to share their ideas on how to improve library services.

The conference will be held on 12 June 2016 and will feature a range of speakers and workshops. Librarians are encouraged to attend and to participate in the discussions.

The conference is open to all library professionals and is free to attend. Librarians are encouraged to register in advance and to take advantage of this important opportunity to improve library services.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.

•

The library community is being reminded to participate in the annual Library Management and Senior Leadership Conference (LM&SLC). The conference is an important opportunity for librarians to network and to share their ideas on how to improve library services.

The conference will be held on 12 June 2016 and will feature a range of speakers and workshops. Librarians are encouraged to attend and to participate in the discussions.

The conference is open to all library professionals and is free to attend. Librarians are encouraged to register in advance and to take advantage of this important opportunity to improve library services.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.

•

The library community is being reminded to participate in the annual Library Management and Senior Leadership Conference (LM&SLC). The conference is an important opportunity for librarians to network and to share their ideas on how to improve library services.

The conference will be held on 12 June 2016 and will feature a range of speakers and workshops. Librarians are encouraged to attend and to participate in the discussions.

The conference is open to all library professionals and is free to attend. Librarians are encouraged to register in advance and to take advantage of this important opportunity to improve library services.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.

•

The library community is being reminded to participate in the annual Library Management and Senior Leadership Conference (LM&SLC). The conference is an important opportunity for librarians to network and to share their ideas on how to improve library services.

The conference will be held on 12 June 2016 and will feature a range of speakers and workshops. Librarians are encouraged to attend and to participate in the discussions.

The conference is open to all library professionals and is free to attend. Librarians are encouraged to register in advance and to take advantage of this important opportunity to improve library services.

•

The library community is being asked to participate in a new initiative aimed at improving library services. The initiative is called the Digital Information Literacy Project, and it is aimed at improving digital literacy skills among students and staff.

The project will involve a range of activities, including workshops, lectures, and online resources. The goal is to help students and staff develop the skills they need to navigate the digital world and to make the most of the library's resources.

The library is currently in the process of developing the project and is inviting suggestions from the community. Librarians are encouraged to participate in the development process and to share their ideas on how the project can be improved.