Researcher Survey: How Do You Find Code for Research? – Now Open

The ARDC has launched a survey to explore how researchers find research software.

The survey results will inform priority areas for the development of relevant infrastructure and facilitate researchers' access to software they need. The ARDC has engaged eResearch Consultant Dr Frankie Stevens to produce a report detailing the findings of the survey, which will be published and presented at eResearch 2022.

The survey is anonymous, and will take around 10 minutes to complete. We kindly ask you to share the survey with your colleagues. The survey closes on 14 August 2022.

Library Impact Research Report: Faculty Publication Patterns at a Large Urban University and Correlation with Collections Use and Size

As part of ARL's Research Library Impact Framework initiative, the University of Illinois Chicago (UIC) conducted a study to demonstrate how the availability and use of library collections impacts faculty productivity and publication patterns over time.

To address these questions, the project used various statistics: collection size (measured by journal holdings), collection use (measured by number of references in the publications), number of publications by faculty, publication impact (measured by number of citations), number of co-authors, grant funding, page counts, and faculty demographic information.
